

Fire Chief City of San José

The nation's 10th largest city is seeking a new Fire Chief. Serving a population of over 1 million at the global center of innovation in California's Silicon Valley, the San José Fire Department is supported by 852 employees. A full-service metro agency that responds from 34 fire stations, the Department is responsible for a 206 square mile protection area that includes residential, commercial, high-rise, industrial, the San José International Airport and wildland interface areas.

The ideal candidate will be a visionary and courageous leader who is comfortable operating within the complexity and uniqueness of a large urban department. A minimum of five (5) years of progressively responsible experience in a comparable setting at a Battalion Chief (Chief Officer) level or higher, plus any combination of education and training equivalent to a Bachelor's degree are required.

The salary range for this position is $141,810 - $221,651 and is supplemented by a competitive benefits package. Visit our website at www.tbcrecruiting.com for more details and to apply online. This recruitment will close at midnight on Friday, April 23, 2010.
